MUST REGISTER TO VOTE FOR PARK BOND ISSUE

Because of the fact that some confusion is said to have arisen over the status of the Central park bond issue, Levi W. Reeves, manager of the bond campaign, has given out a statement explaining the state of affairs with reference to the proposed $2,000,000 bond issue, and urging every voter in the city to register in order that they may be able to cast their votes on this question the day of election, September 5.

"It has not been fully understood," said Mr. Reeves, "that the park bond issue is the only bond issue left intact by the recent meeting of the city council, which was called for the purpose of seeking to compromise the situation and legalize the other proposed bond issues. This project has the active indorsement of the real estate board and other civic organizations.

The public should understand that there is no bond issue before the people at the present time, nor any other bond issue to be voted upon by the people of Atlanta on September 5, except the $2,000,000 issue that will be used to provide funds for the Central park and for improvements to be made in other parks about the city."

Must Register.

Mr. Reeves also called attention to the fact that every citizen wishing to vote upon the park bond issue must register, and he declared that the registration books for the bond election will remain open until the day of the election, September 5.

The fact that newspaper is said to have developed in some quarters against the park bonds inspired the backers of the Central park project to call upon friends of the movement to get squarely behind the project and lose no time in asking people to register and to vote for the great public improvement.

The opportunity to secure this valuable acreage for park purposes, it has been stated, may not be presented to the city again with its present advantages, and those who feel a responsibility of providing additional playground space for present, as well as future generations, are urged to give the Central park movement their vigorous indorsement and active backing.

The Central park proposal has not only the practically unanimous support of the civic bodies of Atlanta, and the backing of thousands of public-spirited citizens, but it has been indorsed by all the newspapers of the city, which stand as a unit for the project, it was stated.

SCRIPPS-HOWARD BUYS THE PITTSBURG PRESS

Pittsburg, Pa., July 27.—Announcement was made today by Colonel Oliver S. The purchase price was not announced, but it was said at the office of the Press to be the largest ever paid for a single newspaper property in this country. Colonel Hershman will continue as a director and stockholder of a large minority stock in the Press.

Meat for Health

DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING STEAKS, CHOPS AND ROASTS.
Meats, as a general rule, should be thoroughly cooked. The practice of eating uncooked meats, particularly pork, is not sanctioned by health authorities.

The methods of cooking best applied to cuts such as steaks, chops and ribs, are direct broiling, or pan broiling, and roasting.

The cuts best suited to this method are the porterhouse, sirloin, club and tenderloin steaks, and prime ribs of beef; the rib and loin, cutlet or leg of veal; the rib and loin, cutlet or leg of mutton, and the rib or loin, shoulder and ham of pork.

In direct broiling, steaks or chops are cooked by a very hot direct heat or flame. They are seared first on one side and then on the other. After searing has been accomplished, the heat is lowered and the meat turned frequently until done; then seasoned, spread with butter, and served.

In pan broiling, the same process is followed, except that a pan is used. Some of the fat trimmed from the meat is used to grease the pan.

In roasting, the meat should be seasoned and, when desired, dredged with flour, depending upon the cut; then placed in a very hot oven at a temperature of 450 to 500 degrees, until well seared or browned. The temperature then should be reduced to about 350 degrees, and the roasting continued until the meat is done. Many persons prefer the self-basting pan, but many cooking experts insist that the best method is the use of an open roasting pan and the basting of the meat during the baking. Each housewife no doubt will prefer to use the method which she has found most to her tastes.

COOKING EQUIPMENT FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

A housewife often is heard to exclaim that she does not use or prepare the less known cuts, such as the plate, brisket, chuck and shank, because it takes so much fuel and time. As a matter of fact, it has been found that simmering meat in a covered or closed pan for several hours takes no more fuel than broiling steaks 12 or 15 minutes or roasting meat two to three hours. There are now so many fuel-saving devices on the market, which also save labor and do not need constant watching, that every one can afford to own at least one of these which are relatively low in price.

Among the best of such devices are the tightly covered iron or aluminum pots, waterless cookers, Dutch ovens, pressure cookers and fireless cookers. Each of these has its particular advantages, but all are a boon to the housewife in the results they produce when properly used. The type chosen depends upon the needs of each particular family.

Any cut of meat can be made tender, appetizing and delicious in flavor, if prepared according to directions in any of these cookers. Companies which manufacture the cookers will supply recipes.

When meat is prepared in equipment such as has been described, the loss through shrinkage in cooking will also be much less than when the meat is prepared in other ways.

The use of inexpensive cuts of meat will be the rule and not the exception in the household which possesses one of these cookers.

The specific directions for the use of each cooker may differ, but, in general, the points to remember in the cooking of the less familiar meat dishes, such as pot roasts, braised meat, steaks and casserole dishes, are to sear the surface of the meat in order that the juices will be retained, to keep a slow, uniform temperature for two hours or more (except when the pressure cooker is being used), depending upon the kind and size of cut, and to keep the utensil tightly covered, except when it is desired to finish the roasting or browning in the oven. The reason is that the confined steam gradually softens the connective tissue of the meat.

SOUP MAKING.

In making soup from cuts such as the shank, shoulder, rump, et cetera, it should be borne in mind that juices are to be drawn out of the meat. Accordingly, the meat should be placed in cold water, and kept at a slow, even heat for five or more hours. Lean meat and bone both should be included, since bone and its marrow contain gelatin and other substances which add much to the value and flavor of the soup.

This Is A Difficult Time For The Woman Who Bakes

The woman who bakes her own bread finds herself in a most difficult position just this time, and many are actually making failures in what is to them a very simple process—bread-making.

The trouble may be due to the flour. The new wheat flour is coming on the market now and it is much more difficult to manipulate than flour from seasoned wheat, being very moist.

If you have experienced any difficulty, permit us to suggest that you stop baking entirely for a while and use UNCLE SAM BREAD. It is not only properly made and wholesome, but more economical.

Uncle Sam Bread is made from flour that is milled from seasoned wheat.

SUMMERVILLE WOMAN IS KILLED BY TRAIN

Summerville, Ga., July 27.—(Special.)—Mrs. T. M. Brown, of Trion, was instantly killed Wednesday when she was struck by a northbound extra freight train on the Central of Georgia railroad at the crossing near the Trion depot.

Mrs. Brown had been to the Trion store and was returning to her home. Apparently she did not see the approaching train. Eyewitnesses state that she had almost crossed the track when the pilot of the engine struck her. She was hurled a distance of 97 feet, and it is said, every bone in her body was broken.

Mrs. Brown is survived by her husband and eight children. She was the daughter of E. M. Griffith, a well-known citizen of Trion.

PROBE OF HIGHWAY BOARD IS FAVORED

After voting to amend the bill by Senator Stephen Pace of the thirteenth district, providing for investigation of the state highway department, so as to prevent appointment on the investigating committee of any member of either house who insisted on the probe—including Senator Pace in the senate and Representative McMichael, author of the similar measure in the house—the senate highway committee Friday afternoon reported favorably on the measure.

The Pace measure provides for appointment of a joint senate and house committee to consist of twelve members of the house and five members of the senate. President George H. Carwell, at a meeting of the Georgia State Automobile association last Tuesday night, emphatically stated he would not appoint any member of the senate on the committee who had insisted the probe, which was biased in any way against the highway department, or who requested to be named on the committee.

No Time Is Lost.
As a result of President Carwell's announcement, the senate highway committee lost no time in taking on the amendment, after which the measure was unanimously recommended to the senate for adoption and will then be sent to the house.

Two weeks ago the Pace bill, without the amendment, was passed by the senate and sent to the house. The latter adopted the McMichael bill, which automatically relegated the Pace bill to the table. The senate highway committee now amends the Pace bill and will again go on to the house calendar, providing the senate acts favorably upon it.

Neill's Bill Adopted.
The senate, at its morning session, adopted the bill by Speaker Cecil Neill, of the house, providing for a referendum to determine whether the state system of electing county commissioners, following a favorable report on the bill by the senate committee on county and county matters.

Only the official signature of Governor Walker now prevents the bill from becoming effective, since the house had already passed it. This measure aroused considerable interest in the county and county matters.

A resolution by Senator Beauchamp, of the twenty-second district, requesting appointment of a commission to investigate fully the question of free textbooks for public schools, was adopted. Senator Beauchamp stated that he was prompted in introducing the resolution by a request from Governor Walker.

Would Name Commission.
The resolution would empower the governor to appoint on the commission the dean of the University of Georgia, president of the State College for women, president of the Normal school, a capable attorney and a business man.

By a vote of 27 to 12 the senate adopted the Neill bill, providing for amending the Australian ballot act so as to eliminate the necessity of grand juries approving this form of ballot in the respective counties in succession before it becomes effective. This measure is now ready for the governor's signature.

A new bill by Senator Morgan, of the fifth district, providing that all fraternal organizations and secret societies file a list of their membership with the clerk of the superior court in the county where they are located, was placed on its first reading in the senate.

The measure further provides against the use of masks by members of any fraternal or secret society, should they appear on the public streets in parade or assemblage, outside of meeting places.

"This bill is not aimed against the Ku Klux Klan," declared Senator Morgan, "but was prompted by the widespread demand for legislation of this character coming from all parts of the state. It will enable the general assembly to get into the matter thoroughly."

"Officials of the Klan may oppose the measure, but personally I believe its passage would help the order. The bill was referred to a general judiciary committee No. 2 for consideration next week."

MAN AND WOMAN HURT IN COLLISION BETWEEN AUTOS

P. Hanlin, of 464 Beecher street, is suffering from a broken collar bone besides other injuries and Miss F. Mauldin, of 162 Atwood street, was severely shaken up and bruised, as the result of a collision Friday afternoon between a coupe and a touring car at Ashby and Oak streets. Both machines were badly damaged.

Hanlin declined to be carried to a hospital, and was given treatment in a nearby doctor's office. Miss Mauldin was treated at her home.

Miss Mauldin, who is a trained nurse, was driving the coupe while the touring car was driven by Hanlin. Witnesses told Call Officers J. G. Bowman and M. C. Williams that Miss Mauldin was going in an easterly direction in Oak street, and Hanlin was going south in Ashby street. They collided on the crossing, it is said.

Charges of reckless driving were docketed against both by the police.

"Vice" Raids, in Attempt To Clean Up City, Result In Heavy Police Fines

Councilman Fred C. Woodall, acting judge of the police court Friday afternoon meted out justice to offenders ranging from dismissals to $50 fines. There were fewer cases of violation of the city traffic ordinances than have been recorded for the past few weeks, but the courts were packed with cases resulting from raids conducted by the vice squads led by Mayor Walter Sims and Alderman Jesse Armstrong.

Fifty-dollar fines were imposed on the inmates taken from 28 Grand Place. Those arrested on charges of disorderly conduct were Marguerite Allen, Virginia Nash, Grace Brown, Angeline Howard, Lucile Nash and Mrs. W. B. Hayes.

At 309 Peachtree street disorderly conduct charges resulted in $50 fines for Mrs. M. D. Cannon, Frances Sullivan and M. D. Cannon and $25 fines for H. Saul and D. P. Sewell. Otis McCarty and Mrs. H. D. Clarke, of 133 Spring street, apartment 11, were sent to the stocks for 30 days each. Cases against Annie May Moore and Lorena Burkhardt, charged with disorderly conduct, were dismissed, while Mrs. Howard and Ruth Jackson were fined $50 on the same charges. Addie Wood was bound over. All were 34 1/2 Ivy street.

A negro house in Boward, near Houston was raided in which it was said a liquor party was being held. The defendants were freed for lack of sufficient evidence with the exception of Tonia Towle who was bound over on $200 bond.

Health Department Makes Two Changes To Reduce Routine

The city's monthly milk report will be discontinued and all contagious disease cultures will be sent to Grady hospital instead of to the city health department in future, it was announced Friday at city hall. The changes are to be adopted by the health department and will be in effect by the end of the month.

The budget "stopped" the assistant city bacteriologist and the stenographer in the chemist's office. Dr. Joe Acker, city chemist, and Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, stated Friday that it would be impossible for the reduced force to handle the same volume of work as formerly.

Only one man is now inspecting the 553 dairies in and around Atlanta, the other one, according to Dr. Kennedy, being useless as a dairy inspector without the automobile which was taken away under the June budget. Henceforth, the city chemist will inspect only milk and water specimens.

Mayor Walter A. Sims expressed a belief that the new system would prove more satisfactory than the old one.

Two New Managers Of Georgia Training School Are Named

C. D. Gibson, of Clatham, and John R. L. Smith, of Bibb, were appointed to the board of managers of the Georgia Training School for Boys by Governor Clifford Walker, Friday. Their terms end September 19, 1929.

Work of Market Bureau Is Shown In Annual Report

Copies of the annual report of the state department of agriculture for 1927 were placed upon the desks of members of the general assembly Friday morning. Delay in distribution was caused by the printer, it was said.

The report came just at the time when the house is debating appropriations for the department, and just after it had voted to eliminate entirely the appropriation for maintenance of the market bureau, one of the principal branches of the department.

The report sets forth that the market bureau has been a large factor during the year in the organization of the Georgia Cotton Growers' Cooperative association, the Georgia Cane Growers' association and the Georgia Peanut Growers' association. It has found a market for many farm products through the columns of the market bulletin, with its more than 200,000 circulation.

Oil Inspection Fees.
In the oil inspection department the report shows that $53,587.89 has been collected during the year, of which $419,367.67 has been turned into the state treasury, the balance of $94,219.72 being used as salaries for inspectors. During the year 375 samples of kerosene, 375 samples of gasoline, and 188 miscellaneous samples. The pure food department reports more than 10,000 samples inspected during the year, and 125 condemnations of a great many articles offered for sale as food.

123 Free of Tick.
In the report of the state veterinarian it is shown that 123 counties in Georgia are now free of the cattle tick, that the infection in 17 other counties is only slight and that only 10 counties still remain under federal quarantine. The work of tick eradication would have been entirely complete by January 1, 1924, but for the "active opposition in Echols, Camden and Charlton counties," the report says.

Two thousand, six hundred and sixty-six drug inspections are reported by the state drug inspector for the year.

In its financial statement, covering all funds used by the department, it is shown that the department turned into the state treasury for the year 1927, in excess of the amount it is allowed to spend, a total of $283,918.49 from the various sources of revenue.

Defends Market Bureau.
Speaking before general agricultural committee number one of the house of representatives Friday morning, J. B. Brown, commissioner of agriculture, defended the market bureau in the house against the attack on the bureau by "fly by night" produce dealers and middlemen.

Mr. Brown stated that many people would like to see the attempt to abolish the market bureau succeed. "Before we had such a bureau," he said, "the producer received $1 for a bushel of potatoes and the consumer in Atlanta paid $4. Now, the producer receives $2 and the consumer only pays $3."

Mr. Brown stated that the bureau was doing more for the Georgia farmer than any other department, but declared that if the members of the house wanted to crush it and leave the Georgia farmer without its help, it was their responsibility and not his.

The commissioner was speaking in opposition to a bill introduced by Representative Wm. Laurens, seeking to reduce the fertilizer tax from 30 cents to 10 cents. He stated that the price for fertilizer had set the main factors in five southeastern states, which was about 30 cents, and that the Georgia farmer would have to pay the tax to the fertilizer manufacturers, whether the state collected it from them or not.

On request of Mr. New, who stated he wanted time to reply to Mr. Laurens' final consideration on the measure was postponed.

A favorable report was voted by the committee on a bill providing for reports of sales of lent tobacco, introduced by Meek, of Coffee, and Johnson, of Bacon.

Farewell Banquet Tendered to Local Insurance Man

A farewell dinner was tendered D. L. Lunden, who for a number of years has been connected with the Queen Insurance company here and is leaving soon to accept a position in Providence, R. I., by a number of his close friends at the Kimball house last night. Short talks were made by those present expressing their regret of Mr. Lunden's departure and their best wishes for his success.

COMMITTEE IS NAMED TO DISCUSS TAX BILLS

Chairman J. M. Jones, of the house committee on constitutional amendments, on Friday morning announced the personnel of the sub-committee from his body which will be entrusted with the task of recommending the best available tax proposal for the state of Georgia.

The sub-committee as appointed is as follows: Aubrey, Barrett, Steele, Rutherford, Ellis, Jones, of Coweta; Ennis, Van Landingham, Fleming, of Hancock; Suttive, Copeland and Culpepper, and the chairman, Jones, of Meriwether.

This sub-committee was authorized at a meeting of the main committee Thursday night and it is instructed to meet early Monday in order that it may report to the main committee at the regular meeting Monday afternoon or night. It is hoped, thus, to be able to report a definite tax proposal to the house by Tuesday morning.

There are a number of bills, all calling for amendment of the constitution for the purpose of reforming the tax system of the state, now before this committee. The principal ones are the bill of Senator Lanford, which has passed the senate with amendments, and which provides both ad valorem and income tax means of raising the state finances; the Elders bill, based upon an income tax but with other clauses, and which is modeled upon the North Carolina law, and the Bussey bill, which would derive the greater part of its revenue by taxation of public service corporations, railroads, insurance companies, etc.

Whether or not the committee will finally recommend any one of these three measures is as yet unknown. There is a possibility that it will draw up an entirely new substitute bill, incorporating the best features of each of the three bills.

Many hearings have been held, and the committee has sought to refuse no interested parties the opportunity to state their views on the vital taxation problems of the state.

COMMITTEE AWARDS TWO SEWER CONTRACTS

Two sewer contracts were awarded Friday afternoon by the sewer committee of general council, subject to approval of the sewer committee of the bond commission, the bond commission, general council and Mayor Sims. After receiving the four additional approvals, the contracts will both go to Case and Cochran, the lowest bidders.

The contracts are for an 850-foot sewer to replace the open drain between Beecher street and the White street branch sewer to cost $14,000, and for alterations in the sewer intersection at Crew street between Love and Bass streets to cost $17,500.

The first project is in line with the plan of the construction department to eliminate all open drains, where sewerage flows exposed to the air. The second one is to remedy a condition which in heavy rains causes streets and residence property in the vicinity of the intersection to be flooded.

HOWARD MAKES TALK TO LEGION MEMBERS

William Schley Howard, ex-congressman from Georgia, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Atlanta Post No. 1 of the American Legion, held at the legion hall last night. Mr. Howard appealed to the legionnaires to do their utmost in encouraging a much-needed constructive agricultural legislation for the state.

E. B. Dunlap, new state commander of the legion, asked for cooperation in the state membership drive. Commander Gambrell presided, and music was furnished by the Post band.

Perryman Urges Radical Changes In Penal System

"The hour has struck for the pardoning powers of Georgia to be divorced and removed from politics," A. J. Perryman, Talbot county, chairman of the Georgia house of representatives penitentiary committee, declared yesterday in a statement outlining the provision of companion bills designed to reorganize the state prison system, already introduced in the general assembly.

"Society and judiciary are suffering and suffering greatly from the present way of granting paroles and clemency to some of our most hardened criminals, oftentimes least deserving of clemency," Mr. Perryman asserted.

"Let the citizenry of Georgia rise up and correct the deplorable condition now existing in our penal system by divorcing it from politics in so far as possible."

Products of Study.
The present bills before the legislature have not been hastily drawn. On the contrary, they are products of much labor and study. These bills are intended to be constructive in their nature. From years of service in the legislature, serving as vice chairman and chairman, respectively, of the house judiciary committee, duties have devolved upon my committee which have been arduous and at times most vexatious. Only, however, should come before personal feeling.

"In 1921, as chairman of the penitentiary committee the duty devolved upon me to inspect the state prison farm, consisting of 2,500 acres of land and a central building, located in Baldwin county. My committee saw fit to make certain recommendations which may have seemed drastic to the person not familiar with the true condition of our state and penal institution at that time."

"So strongly did this committee report appeal to Governor Hardwick that in 1922 he was constrained to pass an executive order appointing Judge W. P. H. Seay, Jr., of Griffin; H. A. Matthews, of Fort Valley; Moses Wright, of Rome; Henry H. Hammond, of Augusta, and R. C. B. of Columbus, to be a committee of appeals, bench, as a condition to inquire into the true condition of the central state penal institution and its farm."

Report Is Sustained.
"This commission sustained the report of the penitentiary committee of the previous year in every particular. The prison bill now before the assembly does not seek to correct a condition, and a condition only, that is unpalatable."

"There should be a segregation of the clemency board and the administrative board. These bills are for this purpose."

Mr. Perryman explained that the measures introduced by him—Mr. Covington and W. G. Sumner, of Savannah, would reduce the annual salaries of the prison commissioners from $2,500 each to $2,000 a year, this saving of $4,500 to be used to pay a state warden who would be a penologist. The warden would be the administrative officer, and the present prison commission would be continued in office as a parole board, while a volunteer board, without salary, would be created to select and supervise the work of the state warden.

"This warden," said Mr. Perryman, "must be a penologist, whose duties it would be to grade the prisoners in the state institution and to make the state farm self-sustaining. The state farm alone costs the state $35,000 per annum for its maintenance. This is unpalatable and unnecessary as, farm containing 2,500 acres, if properly cultivated, should foot the treasury of the state and maintain the institution at the farm."

ROTARIANS PLAN INTER-CITY MEET

Americus, Ga., July 27.—(Special.)
Americus Rotarians have invited the Albany, Columbus, Macon, Moultrie, Quitman, Thomasville and Valdosta Rotary clubs to be their guests when District Governor K. G. Gurnsey, of Orlando, Fla., visits here early in August. About 200 Rotarians are expected to attend the inter-city meet.

LONDON NEWSPAPERS GLOOMY OVER OUTLOOK

London, July 27.—(By the Associated Press)—The recent tendency in many quarters here to take a sanguine view of the progress of negotiations in the reparations situation is disappearing under the influence of the latest reports from Paris which indicate that France and Belgium virtually are immovable from the essential points of their policy in which they differ from Great Britain.

The situation is reviewed gloomily by The Times in an editorial today, saying that the British government has attempted with sincerity and good will to bring the whole problem into that region economic calculation in which common sense may have some chance, but that the purpose behind this attempt is being frustrated away and the shallow conventions of diplomatic delays.

The prospect of negotiations dragging on until autumn is seen by The Times, which adds that in the meantime the symptoms in Germany are disquieting and it regards "the crazy movements" of the mark as of less consequence than indications of growing disorder in Germany.

The conspicuous fact about Germany, says The Times, "is that she is sinking into a sure chaos." The newspaper admits that it is quite conceivable that Germany's passive resistance may break down under the economic strain, but it asks "is there any guarantee that this moment may not coincide with the moment of general collapse?"

"If so," it continues, "how will the allies cope with that? The world is not Europe then he in an entirely different condition than anything conceived in the hour of victory?"

The liberal press suggests that if the Franco-Belgian replies are along the lines forecast for Paris and Brussels the time will have come for Great Britain to follow her own policy toward Germany and either send her own answer to Berlin or submit the whole question to the league of nations.

The Daily Mail charges the British government with being the cause of Germany's stubborn refusal to meet her liabilities. "What France is doing is to keep the peace and must succeed. She is quite capable when her passive resistance ceases."

The French premier expresses a willingness to modify the occupation when this resistance ends, making it as nearly what the British call "invisible" as the necessities of the situation and the objects of the occupation permit.

BILL WOULD REQUIRE INSURING OF COTTON

Representative Evans, of Warren county, on Friday introduced in the house of representatives a bill which provides that no individual or company accepting cotton for storage shall immediately insure said cotton against loss by fire, and bond it against loss by theft, embezzlement or defalcation of officers of the warehouse.

Mr. Evans, in discussing his bill, stated that its purpose was to protect the farmer against loss at the hands of careless or unscrupulous concerns or individuals. He referred to cases where farmers had suffered heavily when the warehousing concerns they had entrusted their cotton to had met financial misfortune, had been burned, or had been made the victims of dishonest officials.

The bill provides that the insurance carried shall be sufficient to reimburse the farmer at the market price of his cotton on the day of fire, theft, defalcation, etc.

It makes violation of the provisions of the bill a misdemeanor.

ELBERT FARMERS TO STUDY ALFALFA

Elberton, Ga., July 27.—(Special.) All plans have been completed by the committee in charge of arrangements for the trip on next Tuesday, July 31, of a party of Elbert county farmers and business men to the State College of Agriculture.

The trip will be a bit unique in that between two hundred and fifty and three hundred farmers of the county will spend a full day on the college farm studying and listening to lectures by the experts of the college. The business men of the towns of Bowman and Elberton have agreed to furnish automobiles to carry the party.

This trip has been arranged as a part of the plan to put over a farm program in Elbert county, and especially to create more interest in the growing of alfalfa.

Since the slogan was taken up here weeks ago to "put alfalfa on every farm," many have made plans to grow this valuable crop, and the demand for more information concerning it has grown until it was decided the surest thing to do under the circumstances was to take the crowd to Athens and study it as it is actually growing, and have the experts tell of the preparation necessary to succeed with it.

New Experience.

One of the interesting features to those making arrangements has been the very small percentage (in fact so small as to be almost negligible) the farmers who have ever visited the college.

The people of the towns in the county have pledged over fifty cars to carry the crowd. The farmers going have been required to sign a pledge that they would go and that they would spend the time at the college. The farmers are going to take lunches, and Miss Lula Peck, the home demonstration agent, has agreed to go along and take charge of the lunches and serve a picnic dinner.

When the party arrives at the college, about 9:30 o'clock, they will be taken to the various alfalfa fields and experimental plots, and these will be shown and explained by Dr. Fair of the college faculty. At 12 o'clock the party will go to the college for dinner.

Immediately after the noon hour, all will meet in Hardman hall, where Dr. Soule, president of the college, will talk on live stock and dairying, and then Professor Wood will talk on poultry.

After these talks the party will be

FRANK McWHORTER ENDED OWN LIFE

The East View Baptist church. The top of his head was blown off. Two small knife wounds, one on the throat and one over the heart, showed how he had tried to kill himself with the small knife he had used in his attack on his wife and sister-in-law.

Witnesses who appeared before the coroner's jury placed out the progress of the tragic hour that intervened between the time McWhorter left the automobile and the time, just as day was breaking, when he pulled the trigger and ended his life.

Knife Too Dull.

It seems that he had gone directly into the clump of woods, opened his shirt and thrust his knife into his breast. The blade was too short to touch a vital spot. Then he threw back his head and dragged the blade across his throat. It was too dull to inflict a vital enough wound to kill.

Then, blood dripping from his wounds, he began a hunt for a run. He stopped first at the shanty of a negro woman. He told her he had been bitten by a dog and wanted a gun to kill it. She had no gun. He walked farther, finally reaching the house of Pete Spriggs, one of the men who found him. Here he repeated the story of the dog and Mr. Spriggs gave him the shotgun. He hurried away, back into the woods. A few minutes later Spriggs heard the boom of the gun. Then all was silent.

Mrs. McWhorter and Mrs. Johnson were carried back to their father's home after their wounds had been dressed by Dr. T. E. McBryde. Attending physicians anticipated their recovery unless blood poisoning should set in as a result of the slightly rusty condition of the knife. The contingency was being guarded against carefully.

B. H. Leonard is the coroner who conducted the investigation into the death. The jury which returned the verdict of suicide was composed of A. W. Farrer, J. E. White, N. A. White, W. W. Carmichael, O. M. Morris, L. C. Collins.

FEDERAL OFFICERS PROBE SHOOTING

Declaring that many false and unwarranted rumors have tended to stir public opinion against the prohibition department, and that neither the prohibition director nor the district attorney's office is trying to "shield any one from censure or prosecution, or to whitewash any facts in connection with the investigation" into the gun battle near LaGrange Tuesday, in which one federal agent was killed, another wounded and a boy slightly hurt, District Attorney Clint W. Hager stated Friday that representatives of the federal prohibition department and the United States district attorney have been sent to West Point, Ga., to make an impartial investigation of the affair.

J. Gordon Andrews, assistant to a federal agent, received fatal wounds, Officer J. G. Cobb was wounded when they, with other officers, attempted to halt an automobile occupied by three boys, A. S. Hamby, Frank Jones and Roy Williams, who were returning to their homes in West Point from a church festival. They were suspected, officers said, of being run runners. Hamby was also wounded in the gun fight.

Plan Investigation.

District Attorney Hager stated Friday that A. G. Sowell, federal prohibition agent, and J. W. Powell, legal adviser to the federal prohibition director, left Atlanta Friday afternoon to make a thorough investigation from an "impartial and dispassionate" viewpoint.

"Fred Dismuke, federal prohibition director, has made no statement concerning the affair," District Attorney Hager stated, "but is conducting a searching and vigorous investigation and the public is urged to withhold judgment until the investigation and the action of the officers upon the true facts have been ascertained."

"Neither the prohibition director nor the district attorney have any desire to shield any one from censure or prosecution," the district attorney continued, "or to cover up nor whitewash any facts in connection with this investigation. If the investigation now in progress establishes that the officers were at fault, undoubtedly disciplinary action against them will follow, as well as any criminal prosecution."

Urges Sober Judgment.

"The fact that young Williams, Jones and Hamby, the men who were fired upon by the officers, are members of prominent families has tended to inflame public sentiment against the officers. We urge, however, judgment and sober judgment, and that any action taken against any of the principals in this unfortunate shooting be predicated on facts established by fair investigation and not based on prejudice."

Shortly after the departure of the investigating body from Atlanta, District Attorney Hager stated that Phil Lanier, mayor of West Point, requesting him to co-operate with the commission, which has been instructed to call upon him.

The three youths charge, it is said, that Andrews was shot by his fellow officers during the battle. They were preparing Friday to defend themselves against any charges that may be brought by federal authorities as the result of Andrews' death.

Claim Made by Boys.

They declared they were prepared to prove that they fired only two shots during the two-mile running battle, while official reports charge that Andrews was the victor, firing three bullets and that a fourth bullet struck J. Grady Cobb, prohibition agent, who participated in the chase.

An evidence of their contention that Andrews was struck by bullets fired by his companions, the three young men displayed a revolver, which they say was the only one carried by them on the fatal night, showing two empty cartridges and a third that failed to explode.

Hamby, Jones and Williams were exonerated of charges of murder at a preliminary hearing held in West Point Thursday night before Justice of the Peace Lee Hodges.

The shooting occurred on the West Point-Chapley highway when Agent Cobb and Special Deputy Andrews attempted to stop the automobile in which the youths were riding. In the belief that the car contained whisky, in the bottle that followed, Andrews was fatally wounded. Cobb was shot in the arm, and A. S. Hamby, an ex-convict, charged with intent to murder against Cobb, took refuge with others whom, he said, took part.

GEORGIA SOLONS VOTE CONFIDENCE IN CLERK

resolution, declaring that in reflecting upon the personal character of Clerk Bridges, it was distinctly unfair, inasmuch as no one who was present when the vote in question was taken could swear that it was not correct as announced. He pointed out the passage of the resolution meant virtual impeachment of Mr. Bridges and that it would put a stain upon his character which could never be wiped out.

Representative Linder, of Jeff Davis, spoke for the resolution, while Moore, of Appling, and Holden, of Clarke, spoke against it.

New, of Laurens, in speaking for the resolution, was questioned by De La Perriere, of Jackson, with the question whether Mr. Bridges did not oppose him in his race for the legislature in Laurens county. Mr. New admitted this, but said he was elected, nevertheless.

There were numerous other speeches both for and against and when the call of the roll for the final vote began, many of the members took advantage of the rule which allows each man three minutes in which to explain his vote. By far the greater number of these speeches were to the effect that the member approved the principle of not allowing state department employees to hold office in the legislature, but that his personal friendship for Fred Bridges and his knowledge of his character, demanded that he vote "nay," thus showing his confidence in the man attacked.

Before announcing the result of the vote, Speaker W. Cecil Neill called upon the clerk to read the rule which forbids any applause or demonstrations in the house, but despite this presentation the overwhelming vote of vindication was the signal for an outburst of hand-clapping which did not cease until Mr. Bridges walked down the aisle from the anteroom where he had been waiting and resumed his stand at the left of the clerk's desk.

As a result of this debate Friday, it is not probable that the general appropriations bill will reach the senate before the latter part of next week.

Both house and senate adjourned Friday morning until 10 o'clock Monday. The house will then resume its task of reviewing, item by item, the appropriations bill, while in committee of the whole.

Considerable debate is anticipated on several sections of the bill, particularly the remainder of the items for the department of agriculture, the appropriation for pensions and for the state highway department.

There are few subjects which give us more food for thought than that of life insurance and its possibilities when we see the enormous sums which are being accumulated in assets by life insurance companies and the rapid manner in which these accumulations are increasing yearly.

The assets of a life insurance company are principally invested in the security of the country in which their home office is located.

Lived in Atlanta.

Frank McWhorter lived at 8 Box street since his separation from his wife. He had been employed recently as a meat cutter in the Brooklyn market at the corner of Walton and Marietta streets. W. O. Winkle, proprietor of the market, had granted McWhorter the use of his car Thursday night, on McWhorter's pretext that he wanted to go after his own car.

The McWhorters had four children. When Mrs. McWhorter left two weeks ago she took two of the children. A third is with McWhorter's father in Villa Rica and a fourth with another relative.

The blood-stained automobile was brought back to Atlanta Friday by Sam Jordan, 122 Jayne street, and his cousin, Andrew Jordan, of Jettkie and Griffin streets, who had been McWhorter's companions on the tragic trip.

C. L. McWhorter, father of the deceased, operates a meat market at Villa Rica, where McWhorter was raised.

The McWhorters had formerly lived with Mrs. McWhorter's father near Rockmart.

Sims is alleged to have shot Phillips because of unfounded jealousy. Phillips, a salesman for the Enterprise Sausage company, 125 Peters street, was called from the factory by Sims and shot three times as he stepped to the sidewalk from the door of the factory just after 6 o'clock Thursday evening.

Two of the bullets entered the left chest, one being imbedded between the ribs. This was removed by surgeons. Another shot shattered the right arm. Surgeons at the Grady hospital, where he was carried for treatment, stated Friday night that they did not think Phillips' life endangered from the wounds, but that he may have permanent injury especially from the bullet which broke the bone in the right arm.

Fires Without Warning.

Phillips stated to the police Thursday night, just after the shooting, that Sims fired upon him without explanation. "I suppose it was about his wife, however," Phillips stated.

Both Phillips and Mrs. Sims denied that there had been any affair between them since her marriage, and they both claimed that Sims' jealousy was unwarranted.

"The wounding of Phillips Thursday night by my husband was the result of some misunderstanding between him and me," Phillips stated. "I have been informed, told by my husband that I had been for an automobile ride with Phillips," Mrs. Sims stated.

Detectives investigating the case stated Friday that they were holding Mrs. Edwards because they have reasons to believe that she and her husband are helping shield Sims. They intimated that they expected to show that Mrs. Edwards' husband is now in company with Sims and has been since the shooting.

Bill Would Reduce State Commission To Three Members

Wimberly, of Toombs, and Rountree, of Emanuel, are joint authors of a bill introduced in the house of representatives Friday morning, which would reduce the personnel of the state public service commission from five to three members. The bill was referred to the committee on railroads and the authors will be heard at a special meeting called for Tuesday morning before the house convenes.

The bill is in line with recommendations made by former Governor Hardwick, in his message to the legislature, in which he advocated the elimination of various state house positions in the interest of economy.

error Hardwick, begging permission to take my husband's place and serve his term for him, because I knew he was good at heart, and was not mentally responsible for the incident that caused his arrest.

"Governor Hardwick kindly replied that he would give my appeal careful consideration, but said it was impossible for anyone to serve a prison sentence by proxy. Nevertheless, if they say my husband must go back there, I shall renew my plea."

Morrell's case was heard in a New York court Friday, and decision was postponed until the arrival of detectives from Georgia, the dispatch concluded.

Morrell's threat to commit suicide if he is returned to Georgia brought immediate action from state officials about a week ago when the fugitive was captured in New York. Governor Walker directed the prison commission to make a thorough investigation of the story of the ex-convict, making it plain that he did not believe the charges of brutality true.

The prison commission replied with the statement that the story was groundless and that Morrell was an extremely difficult prisoner to handle. New York papers, in commenting on the case, have mildly indicated their disbelief of the story of alleged brutality unfolded by Morrell.

Change of Venue In Garrett Case Denied by Court

Cumberland Court House, Va., July 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—The state of Virginia lost today its effort to have the trial of R. O. and L. C. Garrett transferred from the jurisdiction of Cumberland county and the two county officers, as they wished, will go on trial here Monday on charges of first degree murder in connection with the death of Rev. Edward Sylvester Pierce, Baptist minister.

In denying the motion for a change of venue, Judge B. D. White, presiding at the request of Governor Trinkle, said the prosecution had failed to show good cause why the case could not be given a fair and impartial trial here and directed the sheriff to be prepared to go ahead with the selection of jurors Monday morning. An effort will first be made to obtain a jury from the panel previously selected—the manner of which selection came under sharp criticism from the prosecution—and if this is exhausted the court itself will prepare a venire to be summoned for jury. No court will be held tomorrow. ## COURT WILL HEAR PETITION TO HOLD BARRETT COTTON

Athens, Ga., July 27.—(Special.) Hearing on the petition restraining anyone from moving cotton stored in the Athens bonded warehouse is scheduled to take place here tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. The cotton, originally stored by the owners with Barrett & Co., of Augusta and Athens, now in bankruptcy, is tied up under a temporary injunction signed by Judge W. L. Hodges when Barrett & Co.'s embarrassment first became public about a week ago.

About 600 bales are involved, and the Bank of Charleston is seeking to gain possession of the cotton to cover loans made either to or through Barrett & Co., it is stated. J. J. Williams and B. F. Hardman, local banker and cotton man, respectively, are in charge of the cotton as receivers. Judge Blanton Fortson will preside.

Frank H. Barrett, president of the firm, made known publicly his plight when he gave up his seats on the New York and New Orleans cotton exchanges because he was "unable to meet" his obligations. Simultaneously with this announcement it became known that large creditors were already on hand and conferring with a view to saving the firm from bankruptcy. After conferences extending over several days, it was announced that a committee of three was to take over the company's affairs at the Augusta headquarters.

Railway Transportation In the United States

By Albert B. Cummins, United States Senator from Iowa, and Chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the Senate.

Article VI. Desirability of Consolidating the Railroads. Best Students of Problem Favor Consolidations—Opposed by the Stronger Railroads, Who Fear Effect on Their Financial Standing—Opposed by Proponents of Government Ownership and Operation—Organization of New Companies Under Federal Law.

The best minds of America are in absolute agreement respecting the desirability of consolidation. The opposition to it comes from two widely different sources. Most of the big railroads are fighting it, not, as I understand, because they do not see the conclusiveness of the argument which I have presented but because they fear that the consolidation of a weak road with a strong one will put a burden upon the stronger road that would impair the value of the securities it has issued and affect its financial standing. Another influential body of objectors—and this body is made up largely of men who believe in government ownership and operation—seem to believe that consolidation would destroy useful competition and that it would increase the influence of the railroads in legislation proposed in the interest of the people. They are willing to consolidate all of the railroads in government ownership, but they seem to be unwilling to consolidate them into a few systems so that the government control of rates will become possible without giving to some railroads more than they ought to have and to others revenues which are insufficient to sustain them. I will first examine the validity of the objection urged by the big railroads.

Courts Must Decide. Unless settled by agreement the value of railway property, whether in a condemnation proceeding or for the purpose of fixing rates, or in the process of consolidation, presents a judicial question and must finally be determined by the courts, guided by the law of the land. It may very well be that the value of such property when the government is seeking to acquire it is not precisely the same as when the government is exercising its rate-making power over it; likewise there may be elements of value which should be considered when it is sought to enforce the consolidation of two properties into a single private ownership which it would not be lawful to consider in either acquisition or sale. But I do not attempt to say what the courts will finally hold to be the law of the land as to values when two or more public utility properties are consolidated under compulsion. What I do say is that if the parties to the consolidation can not agree upon values, the government, through some tribunal—and ultimately through the courts—can and will fix these values and that it must be assumed by every loyal citizen that they will be fixed fairly and justly according to the law which governs the case.

Woman Attempts To Take Poison Following Quarrel

Screams of a pretty bob-haired young woman, suffering intensely from carbolic acid burns, Friday morning aroused the attention of policemen as the auto bearing her to the hospital sped through their beats.

At the Grady hospital the young woman declined to be taken from the machine. She was then rushed to Nobles' hospital at South Pryor and Fair streets, by a young male friend, where she was finally quieted after treatment.

The man gave his name as Police man Jack Hyman as J. O. Lock. He stated he was an electrical contractor with offices at 14 South Pryor street. He gave the young woman's name as Miss Agnes Jones, and her address as the apartments at Euclid avenue and Hurt street, in Inman Park.

Lock told the police that the young woman had carbolic acid spilled over her right hand. "I am afraid she got a little of it in her mouth before I could knock the bottle from her grasp," Lock stated.

Miss Jones and Lock had been motoring Thursday night, the latter stated, and had quarreled. At Hodges pharmacy, on Peachtree street, at her request, he stated, he had bought the acid. She told him she wished it for disinfectant use in her apartment, he stated.

Upon returning to Miss Jones' apartment, they sat in the automobile and talked for a while. This was about 1:30 o'clock Friday morning. In a few minutes she got out of the car as if to enter her apartment, the young man said, when he observed her lifting the bottle to her mouth and threatening to drink the acid. He leaped from the machine and knocked it from her hands, Lock said.

Gasoline Tax Bill Introduced in House Allocates Revenue

Among new bills introduced in the house of representatives Friday was that of Doug Burt, of Douglas, and James Baldwin, of Baldwin, which would place a three cents per gallon tax on all gasoline sold in the state of Georgia. It is modeled after a similar law in South Carolina and allocates the funds raised thus: One-third to the general funds of the state, one-third to the highway department and one-third to the various counties, to be used by them in the construction and maintenance of public roads and bridges.

This bill went upon the calendar as No. 456, but it was not taken up until after the adjournment of the house Friday.

Winkate, of Baker, and Mann, of Glynn, that they proposed to introduce the same bill in the form of a substitute for house bill No. 2, thus putting it at the head of the calendar. A hearing on this substitute bill will be held before the committee on Monday, it is understood.

The bill provides that the one-third portion of the tax given to the state go to the fund shall be so used during the period of the present discount of the Western & Atlantic railroad lease. After this time expires, it is to go to the highway department with the other one-third.

Police Confiscate Automobile Carrying 230 Gallons of Liquor

Two hundred and thirty gallons of corn whiskey were captured by county police Friday morning, when they seized and confiscated a large roadster on Garrett's Bridge road after a 3-mile chase.

The police finally cut the liquor-laden car off, blocking its flight by driving the police car in front. It was less and coastless, two unidentified white men leaped out of the whiskey car while running at good speed and made their escape in the woods.

LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN FOR MEMBERSHIP

A campaign to make Post B of the Travelers' Protective association the greatest in membership in the southeast will be launched at its regular meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the sheriff's office, at the Fulton county courthouse.

Considered by the interstate commerce commission, and all other plans proposed, are based upon competitive service. In my opinion there will be more effective competition when the roads are consolidated in accordance with the direction of the transportation act than there is now, so that all fear on that score may be dismissed.

No Increased Influence. The suggestion that the influence of consolidated roads in either promoting or preventing legislation would increase is purely fanciful and no one who has the least familiarity with the manner in which railway companies and railway associations attempt to put their views before congress will seriously urge this objection.

There has been a complete revolution in this field of activity during the last twenty years, and the influence of labor unions, farmers' associations, chambers of commerce, railways, civic bodies, and trade organizations of all kinds, is brought to bear on legislation in a different way. I have seen a close observer of this subject for more than a quarter of a century and I think it can be said with absolute accuracy that the old surreptitious methods have been almost entirely superseded by open investigation and public argument. I do not mean to say that selfishness has disappeared from any of these influences upon legislation but I do mean that, in large measure, they are exerted openly instead of stealthily and secretly.

Not do I mean to say that the present day methods are always fair, whether exercised upon the voters in their primary capacity or upon their representatives in legislative or administrative bodies. I know that these investigations, hearings, and arguments, are often marked by misrepresentation, half-truths, and fallacious reasoning, but these are weaknesses that inhere in every form of free government and they can only be met by intelligence, full information, and fidelity to the public interest on the part of voters and their representatives. Again I record the conclusion that there is no valid objection to the consolidation of the railways along the lines of the transportation act, and that the hope of successful regulation of railway transportation and of reducing railway charges lies in following the course there outlined. I believe sincerely that if it is not followed we must adopt the policy of government ownership and operation of the railways.

In my next article I shall endeavor to point out what I regard as the fundamental objections to that policy. (Copyright, 1923, for The Constitution.)

END FEE SYSTEM, URGES GRAND JURY

The salary system for county officers would result in an annual saving of approximately $150,000 to the county, according to resolutions adopted Friday by the Fulton county grand jury, urging that the Fulton delegation in the general assembly use every legitimate means in support of pending legislation that would let the voters decide between the fee system and the salary system.

The resolution stated that the net compensation of a single county official under the fee system amounts to practically the total of the combined salaries of the twelve judges who preside over the various courts. The resolutions also declared that the fee system is an "anachronism and an absurdity, and must be abolished."

The resolution follows: "Resolved by the grand jury that we urgently request our immediate representatives in the general assembly to use every legitimate means to secure the passage of an act through the general assembly, under which the county would have the right to determine whether the fee system or the salary system for compensation of county officials shall prevail in Fulton county."

Our understanding is that each of our three representatives in the lower house strongly endorsed the proposition, when offered for election, and we respectfully ask each of them now to be as active in securing passage of the proposed legislation as they were in expressing themselves in favor of the proposition, when seeking the suffrages of the voters of the county only a few short months ago.

The salary system would save this county approximately $150,000 annually, and the amount would be so strongly increased, and the beneficiaries under the system would be so numerous, that it is a waste of public funds each year, but in some of the offices involved it is subject to abuses of the gravest and most glaring kind.

Our county officials ought to be acquainted with the fact, when the net annual compensation, after all expenses are paid, in some individual cases amounts up to the tremendous figure of $60,000 to $70,000, the unfairness and folly of the fee system are made clearly evident. Our people are growing under the heaviest burden of taxation we have ever known, and it is the duty of our representatives in the general assembly, to do everything in their power to reduce the burdens of the system, and thus assist in saving to the county the enormous amount, that would be saved by abolishing the fee system, and substituting therefor a system, under which stated and specific salaries would be paid. We, the grand jury, earnestly and solemnly urge the county, call upon you, who represent us in the general assembly, to bend your energies and best efforts to secure the passage of the proposed legislation, that is so urgently needed. The unfairness of the fee system can not be more strikingly shown than by the following comparisons:

The net compensation received by a single county official is almost as great as the combined salaries of the 12 judges, who preside over the courts in our county, and in point of character and ability and fitness for their respective offices, our judges will compare favorably with our county officials.

In our city government we have 15 important departments, and the combined salaries of a few heads of all of these departments, including the mayor's salary, are almost exactly the same as the net compensation received by a single county official under the antiquated fee system.

The fee system is an anachronism and an absurdity, and it must be abolished.

COMMITTEE CALLS FOR REGULATION OF JITNEY BUSES

In a brief session held after adjournment of the house Friday, the committee on railroads of that body voted favorably on a senate bill which places automobile bus lines in the state of Georgia under the supervision of the public service commission.

Amendments were added to the senate bill, setting forth the amount of surety bond and other features for the control of these public carriers. The final amendment provided that the jurisdiction of the commission should be confined to bus lines operating between towns and that jitney buses operating exclusively within the boundaries of any county, or in or town in the state are exempt from the provisions of the bill.

There was some opposition to this final amendment, but it was pointed out that city jitneys already were regulated by the proper city authorities, the entire bill, with all amendments, was approved.

THREE NEGROES HELD FOR POSTAL THEFTS

Three negroes have been arrested at Round Oak, Ga., in connection with a series of petty thefts from the Round Oak postoffice, it was reported Friday by the local authorities.

Charge J. P. Johnston, of Atlanta, Wednesday night the office was entered and robbed of about $3 in cash. Twice before this time small amounts had been secured. One of the prisoners is said to have made a confession.

Dial Telephone Service To Begin At Midnight Hour

The dial telephones connected with the Walnut machine switching office will be placed in service at midnight tonight.

The change is made at this time because fewer calls are made at that hour and there is less likelihood of interference with the service.

Although only 4,000 telephones will be connected with the Walnut office at this time the introduction of the new system is an important event and will be attended by a number of leading telephone engineers from New York and other distant points.

The new exchange was planned five years ago and during the past eighteen months an average of 200 men have been at work installing and testing the new equipment.

The building, lot, and apparatus, together with the equipment it was necessary to install in the other telephone exchanges, represents an investment of more than $2,000,000.

To insure the proper installation and operation of the new office, it was necessary to establish schools for engineers and installers. During the past few weeks schools for operators have been in progress and each of the 700 operators in Atlanta has been taught how to operate the manual system in conjunction with the machine switching office.

Every Walnut subscriber has been visited and instructed in the use of the dial and furnished a book of instructions, so that there will be no confusion from a misuse of the dials.

With these precautions and the continuous and elaborate tests of the machinery which have been made during the past month, telephone engineers and city officials feel assured that the new system will be introduced without hitch Saturday at midnight.

LUMMAS BROTHERS INDICTED BY JURY ON SEVEN CHARGES

O. L. Lummas, and his brother, Reeves Lummas, were indicted on seven separate charges by the Fulton county grand jury Friday. The Lummas brothers are thought, police stated, to be connected with an alleged wholesale automobile theft syndicate operating in Atlanta.

An indictment charging assault with intent to murder was returned against J. C. Cunningham, who is alleged to have shot A. L. Robinson, in front of a barber shop on Whitehall street on the night of July 17. Robinson is in a critical condition at Grady hospital.

A true bill was returned in the case of W. R. Smith, who is alleged to have given the Walker-Barnwell Automotive Supply company forged checks in payment of supplies he is said to have obtained from them.

LILIAN

BY ARNOLD BENNETT

Next Week, "The Blood Ship."
By Norman Springer

There was a considerable silence, and then Lilian shot across the seat and leaned heavily against Felix and clasped his neck.

"Daring," she said, "I know I'm going to have a baby!"

They could just see each other. Felix paused before replying.

"Very well. Very well," he said calmly. "We shall see what's right."

Her thoughts concerning Lord Mackworth now seemed utterly incredible to her in their mad aberration.

The next moment she can swerved unexpectedly to the side of the mounting road and the engine stopped; the chauffeur jumped down and peered with it into the secrets under the bonnet. Felix impatiently tried to let down the window, and could not. Suddenly it fell with a bang into its slit, and there was a tinkling of smashed glass.

"Damn it! I ought to have opened the door, but I was afraid of too much cold."

The icy air of the hills rushed like an assassin into the interior of the car. Felix shivered, but could not shut out the cold. Lilian covered his chest with her warm bosom. Gently he pushed her away.

"Let me, darling!"

"It's no use. I shall suffer for this."

After a few minutes the engine was throbbing again, and they had begun the descent. But no device could out-jure away the ruthless night air. Back at the hotel, Felix took brandy and hot water, accepted Lilian's hot water bag in addition to his own, and was in bed and thickly enveloped in no time at all. Lilian kissed him guiltily, and left him. He had her good-night kindly but absently, engrossed in himself.

CHAPTER XVIII
The Dancing Girl.

When Lilian was alone in her room she thought anxiously:

"Supposing he should want more brandy in the night—there is none!"

The traveling flask was now empty. Her mother would say how unwise it was to be without brandy, and before starting for the annual domestic holiday invariably attended herself to the provision of it.

She wanted to ring the bell, but the bell was within a few yards of Felix's door—and to ring might be to wake him. Cautiously she stepped into the corridor, hoping to find Jacqueline, the maid, in the service room at the end of the shabby little side corridor where the bell and the room-indicator were.

The door of the service-room was locked. No hope! Even Jacqueline had a bed somewhere and was asleep in it; and brandy was as unobtainable as on a coral island.

She heard steps in the distance of the corridor. Had she time to cross and vanish into the shelter of her room? She hesitated.

The visitant was a woman. It was the girl who talked of a hundred thousand francs. She too, had a bed and was seeking it at last.

"I expect there's no chance of getting hold of a servant tonight," said Lilian meekly, as the girl instinctively paused in passing.

"Anything the matter?"

"I only wanted some brandy. My husband," she meant to say, but could not frame the majestic word—"my friend's not very well. Will you come along with me? I'll let you have some." What a harsh, rasping little voice!

The benefactress' bedroom was in a state of rich disorder that astounded Lilian. The girl turned on every light in the chamber, banged the door, and pushing some clothes off a chair, told Lilian to sit down.

"I'm afraid I'm putting you to a lot of trouble," said Lilian. "You're very kind I'm sure."

"Not a bit of it. I never can find anything! I think us girls ought to stand by each other, that's what I think. Not as we ever do!"

Lilian felt as if the entire hotel had trembled under her feet, but she gave no sign of shock; she desired the brandy, if it was to be had. "It's kind," she said.

"You are French, aren't you? I only ask because you speak English so well."

After a moment the girl replied, her head buried in a drawer:

"You bet I'm French. My mother sent me to a convent in London so as I could learn English. They wanted a few French girls for the chorus of a revue at the Pavilion. Soon as I got in there I never went back to the convent and I've never seen me since either. I was in that chorus for a year. Oh!" She produced an ingenious and costly traveling spirit-cass.

"Why? What is it?" Lilian exclaimed as she took a flask.

Tears were ravaging the cheeks of the benefactress. "No! Damn! The benefactress stamped her foot and raised her thin, loose, bare shoulders. "Gambling's it. I always lose here!" She was speaking through her teeth. "Cleaned out tonight! Naked! You see it's like this. Gambling gives you an emotion! It's the only thing there is for that—I mean for me. . . ."

"Did you see that fat beast snook to me tonight in the Casino? Well, he offered me ten thousand francs and I slapped his face for him in the entrance hall. He knew I was strong. I was a fool. Why shouldn't I have done what he wanted? But no! I'm like that, and I slapped his face and I'd do it again. I would! He's Spanish, you know, the biggest shareholder in both the big hotels here."

"I've only got to go to Paris to get all the money I want. Yes. But I'll sell myself for a year to be able to pay my bill straight off in the morning and cheek 'em. I'll be near a thousand francs, and I haven't got ten francs, besides having the whole belly torn against me."

"I'm very sorry," said Lilian. She went into the intimidating, silent, ivory-hiding corridor again. She listened at the door, which she had left ajar between the bathroom and Felix's bedroom. No sound! In the solacing, perfect silence of her room, she poured some of the brandy into a glass and then, taking her bag, returned to the benefactress.

"Here's your flask, thank you very much," she said. "And here's a thousand francs, if it's any use to you." She produced a note which Felix had given to her after his winning. The money was accepted, greedily.

If you're here in a week's time, in five days, you'll have it back," said the benefactress. Tell me your name. You can trust me. I don't believe you're real, though! You couldn't be. There aren't such girls—anyhow at your age."

She stopped, and gave a tremendous youthful sigh. "Ah!" she exclaimed. "If only I was dead, I often ran fomed lying in my grave—eternal peace, eternal peace! No emotions! No men! Quite still! Stretched straight out! Quiet for ever and ever! Eternal peace! D'you know I've been like that all my life? My God! Lilian also burst into tears, agonized. The original benefactress flung herself at the other benefactress with amazing violence, and they kissed weeping.

A quarter of an hour later the dancer murmured:

"I wish to heaven I could do something for you!"

Lilian answered:

"I wish you'd tell me how you stain your skin that lovely Spanish colour."

And she immediately received, not merely the instructions, but the complete materials necessary for the operation.

XIX
Only a Future.

When Lilian awoke the next morning after a very few hours sleep, she did so suddenly, to a full consciousness of her situation. Just as she was, her hair loose and the delicate and absurd rag of the nightgown about her neck, she surveyed herself sternly in the mirror.

She was well content with her beauty. Impossible to criticize it! In every way she was a perfect specimen, than the nameless woman whom she had befriended and who had befriended her.

Partly because she had been generous to her, she felt sympathy for the girl. The phrase "us girls" stung her still, but it was not ill meant. Moreover, she understood better the lower of the girls, whose kiss and clasp had communicated to her a most disconcerting physical thrill.

It was disturbing, though how that phrase pricked and pricked: "It's girls." Little flames shot up from the ashes of her early and abandoned religion.

"The wages of sin—the wages of sin." Was it true about the wages of sin? Was she to be punished? The great terrible fear of conception still dominated her soul; and it grew hourly.

Putting on her peignoir she slipped noiselessly into the other bed, and crept up to the bed. Needless precaution: Felix was wide awake, staring at the ceiling. Before speaking she kissed him, and kept her face for a moment on his.

"Better?"

"Had an awful night. Couldn't sleep a wink. I thought you were just yet." He placed his hand nervously on his right breast. "Does it hurt you?" she asked.

"Not at all. Can't I touch myself?"

"You all right?"

"Oh, splendid! I listened once of twice at the door, but as I didn't hear anything I made sure you were asleep."

She kept silence about her awful, persistent fear, knowing that any reference to it would only irritate him. He was more than ever like a child—and a captious child. She realized the attitude of his sister towards him.

Thank God he was better! If he had fallen ill she would have condemned herself as a criminal for life—persistent fear, knowing that any reference to it would only irritate him. He was more than ever like a child—and a captious child. She realized the attitude of his sister towards him.

THE GUMPS—OLD HENPECKO

what could, happen to herself? The concierge, adored by Lilian for her beauty.

"Would you like the English doctor, Madam?" said he.

"Oh, thank you!"

As for telegraphing to Miss Griz, she decided that obviously she could send no message till the doctor had examined and reported.

In regard to the hotel authorities and servants she had no shame. She alone was responsible for Felix's welfare, and she would be responsible, and they must all think what they liked about her relations with him. She did not care.

SAFETY IN NAVY, HARDING ASSERTS

Seattle, Wash., July 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—President Harding, appearing before the Seattle Press club after his review today in the harbor here of virtually the entire United States fleet, declared that until the day comes when nations abandon use of armed forces America shall find her assurance in a navy of the first rank.

"We were building two years ago at a rate that would have placed our armed sea power in excess of any other power, but in conviction that armament cost and competition was leading to menacing national burdens, we invited an international conference to fix limitations," the president added. "We asked equality with the first rank for ourselves and were accorded it. Let us hope our congress, with the cordial sanction of the American people, will continue that first rank. I believe our obligation to the world means the most exacting restriction of our maintenance within the maximum limitation fixed by the conference, and I believe our clear duty to ourselves is to maintain the equality provided in that maximum until a new baptism of international conscience prescribes a joint action toward reduction or complete abolition."

Lauds Alaska Newspaper.
In addition to his observations on the question of naval power, Mr. Harding said that "those of us who think we know a great lot about newspaper making may learn some very simple fundamentals by going to Alaska."

"I found myself," he continued, "involuntarily doffing my hat to the editor and publisher who succeeds in maintaining a daily issue in a town of eight to twelve hundred people, where the circulation maximum cannot exceed two to three hundred copies. I refrain from an attempted analysis of the relation of the value of advertising to its cost, but the community value of the publication will remain unchallenged."

"There is a limited reflex of the big news of the world, with a larger relative reward for pugilism than world politics, but human interest is fairly satisfied with the tabloid story of world events. Doubtless the Alaska community is quite as well nourished mentally with its restricted news diet as are some of us who find our unadorned way, if we read our newspapers fully, through elaborated and expatiated stories of crime and scandal and wander through a haze of speculative politics."

"The big asset in the successful Alaska sheet is the home news and the fact that the analysis of the making of a newspaper is written, here is the secret of most newspaper successes. Give me a newspaper which is a true reflex of the community it serves and I know I am reading an index to dependable public opinion as well as a potent agent in moulding that opinion."

"An impressive feature of the Alaska press was its manifest honesty, oftentimes revealing an appealing frankness. As honest and an intelligent press, which necessitates a highly purged news, affords a limitless opportunity for community service and the loftiest employment in life. It may preface to the larger congregation; it is invited to an international conference to defend the law; it is the effective mouthpiece of our politics; it is the teacher who knows no vacation; it is the recorder of the agent of human accomplishment, whose simple story is the ever-continuing inspiration to loftier achievement. Let those of us who find pride in associating with the making of the American press the best press in the world, resolve upon a full appraisal of our responsibilities and see that our agency is maintained as editor-in-chief, and that accomplishment writes the big 'beats' which are ever giving the exhilarating thrill to the daily grind."

Praises Alaska.

President Harding in another address delivered here reported to the American people that he had found nothing wrong with their great northern territory; that there is no broad "problem of Alaska" and that Alaska "is all right and doing well."

"I do not believe Alaska can be forced, or that it should be," he added.

"There is no need of government-managed, federally-paid-for, house development. There must be no reckless sacrificing of resources which ought to be held permanent in order to turn them into immediate profits. Where there is possibility of betterment in the federal machinery of administration, improvements should and will be effected. But there is no need for sweeping reorganization."

The president enumerated a number of ways in which the development of the territory should be aided. He declared against ruinous exploitation of natural resources and urged "a development of Alaska for Alaskans." He recommended more restriction on salmon fishing, the territory's greatest industry, and promised that if congress was unable to agree on a program of helpful legislation, he by executive order, would extend the present reservations and their regulations.

Restrictions with respect to utilization of the forests, he said, might well be lightened. Development of the oil and coal resources, he said, and the moral urging of economic conditions, he submitted, but the government should do whatever is necessary to encourage leasing and development of oil lands.

NO WATER SHORTAGE EXPECTED IN ATLANTA

Barring accidents, Atlanta is safe from any shortage of water this summer, W. Zode Smith, general manager of waterworks, assured the waterworks committee of city council at its session Friday afternoon.

The old Frank P. Rice pump, long out of use but kept ready as an auxiliary for such emergencies as the city is now passing through, has been placed in operation and is lifting several millions of gallons of water a day from the reservoir which has been added to the 27,000,000-gal. regular engine is lifting.

For the last three days the water consumption in Atlanta has gone over the 20,000,000-gal. mark, but it will probably continue at a peak until the torrid weather abates. An unusual strain is being placed on the water mains, but it is considered probable that any of them will give way.

Steps were taken Friday to rush the installation of the new engine at the pumping station which has been delayed by the failure of some huge valves to arrive at the expected time.

With Smile on Lips, Herbert Sease Dies In Electric Chair

Little Rock, Ark., July 27.—Herbert Sease, 34, was executed today at the state penitentiary at 5:30 o'clock today. Sease had maintained up to the last minute that "an act of God" would prevent his execution.

As the straps were being adjusted Sease declared that he "was the happiest man in the world" and laughed. On the way from the cell to the electric chair he had been patted on the back by the Rev. A. L. Fletcher, of Little Rock.

"You come here to see me die, but I am not going to die," he told the seventy-five persons gathered to witness the execution. "The same God that saved Daniel will save me."

This statement was followed by a laugh.

As the leather mask was pulled across his face he muttered "have you got it on all right boys?" The attendants stepped back and in a moment Sease was dead.

Sease, charged with having shot Davidson from ambush following a quarrel that "an act of God" would prevent his execution.

Legal battles to free Sease took the case through both the state and federal courts and caused three delays in the writing of the final chapter.

Details of Proposed Merger Of Methodist Churches Given

Cleveland, Ohio, July 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—Details of the plan for merging the separate general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, adopted by the joint committee on unification conference this week were learned tonight.

The report of the committee of 16 which was approved by the joint commission, holds that these two churches are essentially one church in origin, belief, spirit, purpose and in policy and, desiring that this essential unity may be made actual in organization and administration throughout the world, proposes a plan of unification and recommends its adoption by the two churches.

Article one is a declaration of union as follows:
The Methodist Episcopal church, south, and the Methodist Episcopal church, north, shall be united in one church with two jurisdictions under a constitution with a general conference and two jurisdictional conferences.

Article two provides that the name of the church shall be referred to the first general conference of the United Church.

Article three says the jurisdiction of the church shall be organized into two jurisdictional conferences, mission conferences and missions, now constituting the Methodist Episcopal church and any other such conferences and missions as may hereafter be organized by its jurisdictional conference with the approval of the general conference.

Jurisdiction number two shall comprise the churches, annual conferences, mission conferences and missions, now constituting the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and any other such conferences and missions as may hereafter be organized by its jurisdictional conference with the approval of the general conference.

Same Delegates.
The general conference and the jurisdictional conferences shall be composed of the same delegates as the annual conferences, and by and from the annual conferences, provided said general and jurisdictional conferences shall have not more than one ministerial delegate for every 45 members of each annual conference and not less than one ministerial delegate for every 120 members of each annual conference and an equal number of lay delegates, chosen according to the regulations of each jurisdiction.

Every general conference shall be by jurisdiction and shall require the accepted majority vote of each jurisdiction to be effective.

Subject to the limitations and restrictions of the constitution, the general conference shall have full legislative power over all matters distinctively connecational.

Bishops of the two churches as at present constituted shall be bishops of the united church without further action.

The bishops shall select by a majority vote one or more of their number from each jurisdiction to preside at the sessions of the general conference.

Each jurisdiction shall have a jurisdictional conference possessing the full powers of the general conference of the church now constituting said jurisdiction, except such powers as are herein vested in the general conference, or which may hereafter from time to time be legally delegated to the general conference, by the jurisdictional conference.

Each conference shall meet quadrennially where the general conference is to assemble and immediately prior to its assembling and when desirable under the same conditions as the general conference.

All decisions of the judicial council shall be made by a majority of the total membership of the council.

The general conference at its first session will provide a method of amending the constitution.

In all matters not specifically set forth in the plan and until the general conference shall otherwise order, the rules of government of the respective churches shall be in full force and effect.

The plan "recommends that financial support of the colored Methodist Episcopal church be continued by the jurisdictional conference, it is historically related and to such extent as that jurisdiction may deem wise."

Increasing interest of Atlanta ministers in the Richey evangelistic and faith healing service now in progress at the city Auditorium was evidenced at the Friday evening meeting in the announcement of the Rev. G. L. Hickman, pastor of the Oak Grove Methodist church, that he will begin a series of revival meetings in his own church on August 1, and that faith healing will be a part of it.

As a preliminary to this statement, Rev. Hickman gave on the stage his personal testimony concerning what he declared to be one of the most remarkable healing cases of this century.

He said that he will begin a series of revival meetings in his own church on August 1, and that faith healing will be a part of it.

On Wednesday of this week, he declared he was called to Mrs. Tolbert's home by phone, and that it was perhaps a summons to her deathbed. He found her, however, very anxious to go to the Auditorium, and arranged to supply an Awtry & Lowndes ambulance for this purpose.

On Thursday, he said, Mrs. Tolbert was taken to the Auditorium in the ambulance, carried into the building on a stretcher, where she lay until Evangelist Richey approached her, put his hand upon her, and prayed that God would heal her disease from both sides.

Thereupon, he said, Mrs. Tolbert arose from the stretcher, unaided, walked back and forth across the auditorium in front of the stage, shouting praises to God. Later she did not resume her recumbent position, but sat in a chair until the conclusion of the meeting. That evening she welcomed her astonished husband, who had no previous knowledge of these events, as he came home.

A development admittedly unusual in revival meetings occurred Friday evening when Evangelist Richey found it necessary to issue two separate calls to the altar, with an interval of perhaps an hour between the two. Both times the responses were remarkable. When the call was given, people streamed toward the stage, where the slight figure of the evangelist, with extended hand, awaited them.

202 Sign Cards.
By actual cards signed with the names of those who made the pilgrimage to the altar and declared themselves converted, there were 157 at the first call, and 90 at the second call. Adding the 45 who came forward at the morning meeting, there was a total of 292 conversions reported Friday.

Atlanta to the number of about 4,000 who attended the Friday night meeting witnessed scenes which have been rarely paralleled in Atlanta. The remarkable thing about the meeting was not so much the apparently striking cases of faith healing, but rather the spirit which sways the great gathering.

Rev. Charles Henson, pastor of the First Methodist church of Macon, Okla., who was introduced early in the meeting, gave a report of the Richey services at Tulsa, which attracted wide attention. Rev. Henson declared that he is a Georgian by birth, and has himself just completed a series of revival meetings in Macon, Ga., which were held in "the greatest layman in Georgia, Colonel Sam Tate."

There will be morning service at 10 o'clock and the evening service at 7 o'clock. The driver of the car had not been afternoon and evening services at the auditorium.

Speeding Auto Tosses Pedestrian Through Plate Glass Window

Curtiss Shelnett, of Buford, was knocked through a large plate glass window in the store of A. M. Finch, located at 4 Nassau street, about 11 o'clock Friday night when struck by a speeding automobile which failed to stop after the accident.

The driver of the car had not been arrested early this morning. Shelnett said that he was crossing Nassau street when the machine, traveling at an excessive rate of speed, suddenly struck him. He was badly cut and bruised.

Officer J. M. Tugler answered the call.

"That's Bill Fligh, the aviator. He's the guy that used to write ads in the sky in smoke." "Isn't he doing that any more?" "No, he hasn't given it up. He got writer's cramp."—Legion Weekly.

COPELAND TO SPEAK TO GEORGIA SOLONS

Washington, July 27.—Senator Copeland, Democrat, New York, who will speak before the Georgia legislature August 2, will be accompanied on his trip south by Mrs. Copeland, according to information which has reached his office here.

The senator has planned to stop off at Charlottesville, Va., next Tuesday to visit Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, and will reach Atlanta Wednesday morning.

Senator Copeland was invited to address a joint session of the house and senate, at a time convenient to him, in a resolution passed jointly early in the session. His acknowledgment of the invitation, as read in the house, did not set any definite date. It is understood that he will speak on the subject of public health and mental hygiene.

Each jurisdiction shall have a jurisdictional conference possessing the full powers of the general conference of the church now constituting said jurisdiction, except such powers as are herein vested in the general conference, or which may hereafter from time to time be legally delegated to the general conference, by the jurisdictional conference.

Each conference shall meet quadrennially where the general conference is to assemble and immediately prior to its assembling and when desirable under the same conditions as the general conference.

Cotton Farmers Read This

July 27th, 1923.

Read the following letter from Messrs. R. L. and W. H. Hall, of Newton, Ga., prominent and wealthy Baker County planters, and our reply to same:

Newton, Ga., July 23rd, 1923.

Wee-Vo Poison Manufacturing Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen: We have your favor of the 21st, and replying to same beg to advise that we don't think it would pay us to use any more poison as the cotton has grown to be such size. However, we wish to say that we feel the poison bought from you served its purpose and proved to be valuable to us all. The only mistake was that we failed to use it early enough. We demonstrated this year that where a field of cotton is poisoned in time and instructions followed, there is no need to fear the Boll Weevil.

Very respectfully,

R. L. and W. H. HALL.

(Signed) R. L. HALL.

Messrs. R. L. and W. H. Hall, Newton, Ga.

Gentlemen: We have your letter of the 23rd and note that you say that WEE-VO has proven valuable as a Boll Weevil Poison and that your only mistake was in not using it earlier, but that you don't believe it would pay you to use any more, on account of the size of cotton.

Replying we beg to insist that the next 30 days is the critical time in the fight on the weevil and that it can be kept in control with our WEE-VO POISON and SPRAYER, no matter how large the cotton is, has been fully proven. We would not recommend mopping on advanced cotton, but we do strongly recommend WEE-VO applied with a sprayer no matter how large the cotton is, or what the weevil infestation is.

We also strongly advise that poison be applied every 10 to 14 days from now on as long as the cotton is green and growing. It would be bad enough if only the forms and squares on the bushes were lost to the weevil, but if he is not kept in control he will not only get all the tender forms and squares and little bolls, but will go down the bush and puncture one-half to full-grown bolls and prevent them from opening.

We can furnish the Poison and Hand Sprayers or Power Sprayers on short notice and we hope you will reconsider and begin a new fight on the Boll Weevil.

Remember—August is the month in which to make or lose your cotton crop. It is not too late to begin NOW—TODAY!

German Communists Abandon Open Meetings Following Warning

Berlin, July 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—The communists have decided to call off their open air "anti-fascist" demonstrations and will confine their party meetings set for Sunday to indoor gatherings which will be under rigid police surveillance all over Germany.

After the federal and state governments had announced widespread preparations for subduing political outbreaks of all kinds under the existing circumstances, the German bolshevik leaders suddenly decided to keep their followers off the streets Sunday, especially as the united socialist and labor factions had ordered their members to hold aloof from all communistic demonstrations.
